

The Great White Killing Machine

Imagine a perfect hunter, an animal that can sense blood from miles away, a creature that could easily bite you in half before you had chance to scream: you're thinking of the great white shark, nature's perfect killing machine. In this persuasion, I will show you why this aggressive, intelligent fish is the deadliest, scariest animal in the water!

If you're going to hunt you need the right tools and the great white's teeth are perfect. Lined with serrated edges, they tear through flesh like a knife through jelly. On top of this, when a tooth is lost or damaged - another is ready to replace it straight away. Would you like to come face-to-face with these 300 terrifying teeth?

In addition to being a good hunter, this beast has super senses that can detect the slightest bit of blood from miles away, giving it a trail to its victim. Also, this monster can detect the electrical signals of any animal in distress...which is unlucky for them!

These beasts don't chase their prey but pounce on them from below with vicious speed! Because they lurk in deep waters, they can scan the surface for seal or penguin shapes that look delicious. When they spot one, they launch at astonishing speeds towards their target from beneath -giving the victims no chance of escape.

Great White Sharks have the typical torpedo-shape, aiding them with efficient swimming skills; these exceptional swimming abilities are only heightened with their powerful tails, which can propel them through the water at speeds of 15 mph!

If you're looking for a deadly creature to rule the waves, if you're looking for the finest hunter around, if you want an animal that could swallow a person whole: then you're thinking of the ferocious, fearsome Great White! This animal is by far the
